As academics, we have been told time and again to write often and as much as we can, but no one teaches us how to keep track of the many different projects that we may be working on at any given time. As a result, we are pulled in multiple directions, and incremental progress made on multiple manuscripts can make it feel like our productivity – and our motivation – is at a standstill. By conceptualizing all of your writing projects as moving through a pipeline, you can make progress on a daily basis and keep everything flowing towards publication.

Sponsored by the NIH-funded INSPIRE+ at Rutgers Postdoctoral Research and Education Program (IRACDA NJ/NY for Science Partnerships in Research & Education) with generous support from the Office of the Dean of Rutgers RWJ Medical School, Dr. Robert L. Johnson. Co-sponsored by Rutgers Office for Faculty Development.

Questions? E-mail Dr. Jianping Xu at jx120@rwjms.rutgers.edu.